RUNNING RATE (It's Rate Time!!)

RUNNING RATE is not the same as referring to simply RATE. RATE is your QSO's per unit time. RUNNING RATE refers to a special, unique situation.

- * Def.: When your number of contacts is limited ONLY by your ability to select calls and to send and receive exchanges.

TO RUN RATE -----

-) Recognize it as a "rate situation."
-) Send calls and exchanges only ONCE.
-) Limit the times you send your own call.
-) Limit "Thank you's," "Good luck's," etc. to ZERO.
-) Keep your signal on the air.
-) Remember that there are others waiting.
-) Come back to or with a partial call.
-) Try to take tail-enders.
-) Have a "stack" in your mind.
-) Listen off your own frequency.
-) JA's - have them stand by occasionally.
-) Return to the faster and/or louder signals, because chances are that they will not stay around, but the weaker/slower ones will since they don't expect to get through.
-) Maintain a sense of urgency.
-) Listen for encroaching signals.
-) RESPOND AFTER THE CALLERS GIVE ONE CALL. This will set a pace, or rhythm, to your operation.
-) Be in command and in control at all times. Otherwise, it will appear that you do not know what you are doing.

MAXIMIZING SCORES

There is always a controversy over what to do when it comes time either before the contest when planning strategy, or actually during the contest, as to which to do -- run rate or look for multipliers. Perhaps the following will assist you in your own plans.

In all but one of the current domestic contests (the North American Sprint is the exception), there is usually sufficient time to either locate all the possible multipliers or have them call you. The section on what we do with our time shows that in Sweepstakes, for example, we spend only about 25-30% of the total time actually making exchanges. This leaves a lot of time for us to locate this "finite number of multipliers." This term really means "finite equalizer," since with a clean sweep, the only factor left in the scoring is QSO's. This being the case, it is probably a better plan to push rate at the beginning, when it is available, and then to look for the multipliers later, like on Sunday, when the going is slower and a search and pounce rate can match or exceed a CQ rate.

The North American Spring, by virtue of its short time (only four hours) and QSY rules, consumes more like 50-60% of our time actually passing exchanges. This condition really puts the pressure on running rate for the duration of the contest and depending more on luck to find the multipliers.

DX CONTESTS -

There essentially is no "finite equalizer" in a DX contest. Consequently, multipliers become a more important factor in the scoring. We must be sensitive to conditions and what is going around us (do not want to miss someone else working a new multiplier a kc away.) Special multiplier "HOT SHEETS" of easy-to-get-but-missed-so-far multipliers placed in front of the operator(s) will help. Search and pounce techniques at lower rate times will lift the rate and fill in the multiplier list.

A few things to remember -

Try to maximize the QSO's at all times, either by running rate or by efficient search and pounce. Effective search and pounce requires an up-to-date dupe sheet. When running a fairly high rate, remember that sometimes the stations come in "bunches." Also, JA's are found in "pockets" across the band and the only to find them is to call a CQ while doing search and pounce.
